SCAC update 11/23/09 by John Snyder

There seems to be no public record of what was done to search for the wells and why they could not be found and not public record of the actual test results.

For the two wells that were monitored:

From the 11/12/09 AG council meeting news report:

"We do want to emphasize `potential,'" Adams said. "We're concerned about the accuracy of the tests." "Officials are uncertain of the accuracy of the tests, where the increased levels of salts came from, whether a seasonal fluctuation is normal and how long the levels may have been rising."

At the WRAC it was reported that no report was to be released until the Northern Cities secret technical group publishes there report in April

Additional Information at http://nipomopumpkinpatch.com/LostWell/Home.html

